NONPROFIT SALARIES & STAFFING TRENDS for 2021

PERSEVERANCE DURING UNCERTAINTY AND CHANGE

LOOKING AT 2020 -

As we documented in last year's 2020 Salary Report, salaries were rising at all levels and in almost all organizations of all sizes at the beginning of the year. This trend was driven by a competitive marketplace for talent and a strong economy. All that changed dramatically in the spring of 2020. The salaries reported here are those in effect in October 2020, and not necessarily those paid in February 2020 or projected for February 2021.

In October 2020, PNP's survey yielded a picture of nonprofits assessing the challenges of the present and planning for the year ahead, while simultaneously evaluating operations in a radically changed environment and addressing the issues of managing new ways of working.

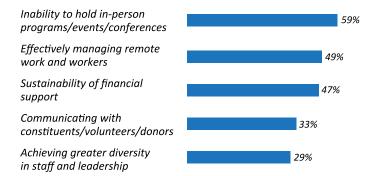

Understanding that their work is needed, organizations are striving to sustain their vital missions and deliver services during the pandemic. Nonprofits are facing economic threats by implementing new ways to keep staff and continue fundraising efforts. Despite uncertainties that were inconceivable at the start of 2020, the resilience of the sector, reflected in our findings, is the real underlying story of this report.

LOOKING AT 2021 -

The greatest issue for nonprofits in 2021 is the ability to institute a new form of crisis management. The sense that "things will never again be as they were" was pervasive in survey responses. Successful nonprofits will be those responsive to a changed world.

What appears to be most daunting for nonprofits is the sense of uncertainty about the future, and yet, a significant number of organizations report clarity about what their primary challenges are, even as they continue to wrestle with strategies to meet those challenges.

The Top 5 Challenges Nonprofits Face In 2021

A WORD OF THANKS

Eight months into the most devastating public health crisis of our lifetime, PNP Staffing Group conducted its annual survey of salaries in the nonprofit sector. This year was an especially difficult time to ask organizations about compensation while so many are focused on simply trying to survive.

We conducted the survey in October, 2020, even as the pandemic continued to threaten the sector. Yet, over 900 nonprofits participated in our survey, taking the time to share information with us that will help all organizations in making informed decisions about staff and salaries in this time of great uncertainty. More than ever, we are deeply grateful to all survey participants. Thank you.

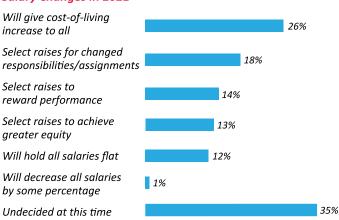

NONPROFIT SALARIES & STAFFING TRENDS for 2021

SALARIES

Competitive salaries are the key to retaining talented staff who have stepped-up in a time of crisis and who are enabling organizations to persevere through uncertainty and change.

Despite all of the turmoil, many of this year's respondents indicate their intention to adjust salaries upward in 2021, at least for some select staff. One-fourth will give cost-of-living increases across the board. Only one percent expect to decrease salaries in 2021.

Salary Changes in 2021

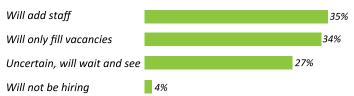

HIRING

More than two-thirds of survey respondents note that they are planning to hire staff in 2021 -- evenly divided between those who will be adding to their workforce, and those who will hire only to fill vacancies. Another one-fourth of respondents will wait-and-see what happens, at least through the first quarter of 2021. Very few organizations noted that they will NOT be hiring any staff in 2021, even to replace retirements or fill other vacancies that may occur.

Of those organizations that are planning to hire staff in 2021 next year, 47% are Human and Social Service nonprofits. Because their services are in urgent demand at this time, these organizations indicated that their highest hiring priority is and will be in program management and delivery.

The next highest priority for adding staff overall is, not surprisingly, in Fundraising and Development.

Hiring in 2021

A CHANGED WORLD: EFFECTS OF THE PANDEMIC

Perseverance and resilience accurately describe nonprofits this year. Even during the worst of the pandemic, 73% of nonprofits report that they did not lay-off staff in 2020 and 80% did not furlough any staff.

Of the 20% of nonprofits who did furlough staff between March and October, almost half (48%) have brought them all back to work, and most (98%) expect to have all furloughed staff returned to their jobs by January 2021.

The principal challenge facing nonprofits is how work will be conducted and managed now. When asked about expectations for 2021, 67% of nonprofits plan to have hybrid working arrangements for staff – some days in the office and some days working remotely. The remaining third of organizations expect 75% - 100% of their staff to work remotely at least through the first quarter of 2021, and perhaps beyond.

Whether staff will be working remotely some or all of the time, non-profit organizations cite several key issues of concern going forward.

Principal Staffing Issues for Nonprofits

Philanthropic Support

Funding core programs and services is more challenging than ever. However, some organizations report that they have been able to maintain and actually increase support in 2020 and are seeking ways to ensure continued support in 2021. Increases in support during the current crisis came primarily from three sources.

WASHINGTON, DC AREA NONPROFIT SALARIES & STAFFING TRENDS 2021 REPORT

HOW TO USE THIS REPORT

This report provides you with salary ranges for 43 key positions critical to the management of a nonprofit, as well as competitive market information needed to make informed staffing decisions. Median salary ranges are noted for each position within five budget-size categories — to serve as guidelines, rather than as precise predictors, for decision-makers.

If your organization is paying below the salary range listed for a position, in your budget category, it means that many organizations in your area are paying a higher salary for a similar or same position. To the extent that you can, it is more advantageous to lean toward the higher side of the salary range when making an offer to recruit talent you wish to hire.

"The fact that nonprofit leaders are clear-minded in their focus on what their principal challenges are during this time of magnified uncertainty and change, confirms a renewed confidence that nonprofits will persevere in finding new ways of working, new ways of managing their mission-driven work, and new ways to sustain and support themselves."
